I started my painting with two blue circles. It reminded me of flowers so I drew more blue and yellow circles. Then I added green stems. I think that it shows our society because even though we think that we're different, we are not.

Polar bear

My painting shows a polar bear sledding from an iceberg. This may symbolize a life that is not easy, but therefore interesting and surprising.

My painting is supposed to show a thing that constantly surrounds me, something that is somehow on my mind all the time and i cannot get rid of. I see it every time i close my eyes.

Phoenix

My painting was created by a simple line. I like feathers very much because they are as delicate as we are in relation to the world. The colours of this painting remind me of a phoenix which, as you may know, can reborn from the ashes. I believe that this painting symbolizes the inner "reborn" that each of us will undergo when we will be ready for it.

My painting was made to take me back to breathtaking summer sunsets. I started with a dot and thought about something that makes me calm, and that was the first thing that has come to my mind.

I started with drawing a pig, 🐷 but then I got a idea that I'll draw something different, and I'll just express my mind. I started with some random lines, and then I something like planet in the background. The next step was painting a blue see in the first view. At the end I added some random lines and irregular dots. It was really nice feel to chillout, and forget about all worries for 30 minutes :)

Unknown

Maybe I'm a little overreactive, but the fact that there are so many things we still don't know about the universe, is making me depressed. Sometimes I feel like a fly because of it; I may live even hundred years, but compared to the world I will still be a little child. People will probably never understand how the universe works and for sure there are things that we can't even imagine. One time I thought that maybe the world is like an ocean. People are trying to get to know it and when they think they succeeded, it turns out to have deeper spots, hiding things which human race have never seen. Also because I'm really afraid of water and same thing goes with the big scary world. Sometimes to satisfy my curiosity I like to imagine that the universe is an ocean with lots of fish, stars, comets and planets and our galaxy is just a small plankton which will never know the real sense.

Freedom

My painting shows a few roses that look kinda like Slavic embroidery. Also one of my inspiration was my friend's T-shirt that had a lot of mini flowers. I think it's express my feelings. Roses reminding me about spring or summer, nice weather and memories. That flower was my first thought so I decided it to be my first dot. During the painting I felt freedom and peace so its my mates, I guess. It is great that everyone has some talent and they showed their own imagination. I think I'm good at understanding people and it is always my pleasure to help them and make them laugh.

when I started painting I had no idea what I would end up with. it shows a hand surrounded by flowers and a title of one of Ben Platt's songs. it can symbolize our journey from ignorance to knowledge. for me growing does not mean reaching a certain age or status, it means becoming aware and mature and I think that's what the painting symbolizes

Healing.

I'm really fond of quotes or sayings. So when I started drawing this painting I thought about one particular that I may say is one of my favorites: "The world is not a beautiful place but it's still worth fighting for. ". I think that we can heal the world and it will heal us. My painting shows colorful sky with bright sun, which can be interpreted as rising hope. I think it shows a place I would love to see one day. It's great that everyone has some talent. I'm good at making breakfasts and tea in particular and I hope I will be able to be better at everything I daily do. I want to redraw this painting in a future! - O.K

"Emotions"

My painting shows various emotions, from sadness to joy. I identify with the picture because I am an emotional person and it shows openly how I feel.

Flower

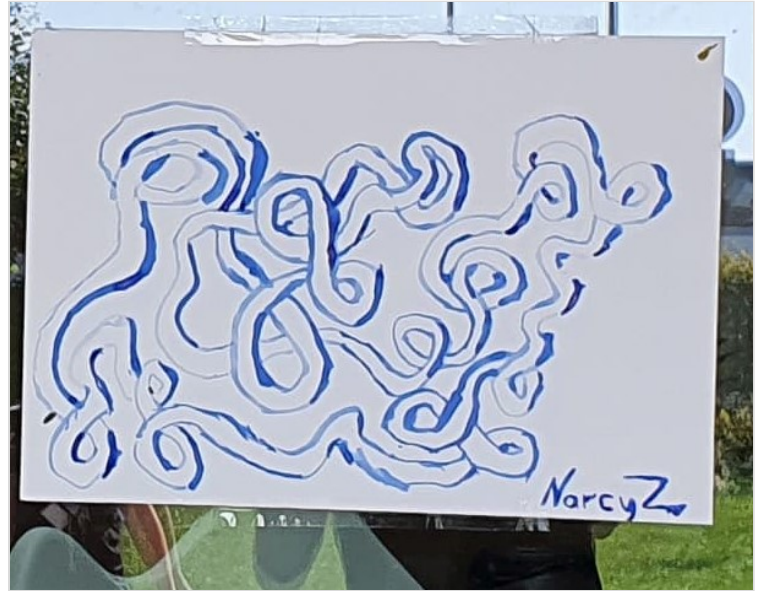

My painting shows red flower and sun. It reminds me of spring, which is beautiful. It's my favorite season. I associate the red color with something good. It's great that everyone has some talent. I'm good at cooking and math.

I've started drawing my painting from one pink line. (some people said it looked like NIKE sign but it wasn't planned :) For me it's kind of "life line". It isn't straight, just like our lives (but how boring our lives would be without any turns and adventures in it?). There are some dots around which have different sizes and shapes. They make some mess because life is never perfect. :]

My painting shows our future which is not predictable. We dont really know which side we should choose.
